Dear Mr. Casey:

The enclosed article indicates that the C.I.A. is not welcome at some universities.

We believe that you are doing a great and patriotic job for our country and making a substantial contribution to its protection and preservation.

We would be happy to welcome you to our campus at any time.

Sincerely,

Ralph W. Adams
President

Brown University students shut CIA recruiting session

By United Press International

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Several hundred Brown University students shut down a CIA recruiting session, chanting a list of grievances ranging from the mining of Nicaraguan harbors to alleged agency infiltration of campus peace groups.

CIA officials said they would try again today to interview prospective applicants for the spy agency at the University.

Steven Conn, a CIA recruiter from Boston, was forced to leave the school's career planning center under a police escort, but school officials said an agency representative would be back today to try again.

Several hundred demonstrators showed up at Monday's initial session. They recited a list of grievances against the CIA, ranging from the mining of Nicaraguan harbors to alleged agency infiltration of campus peace groups.

About 65 of the protesters faced possible suspension or dismissal after voluntarily signing a statement that they had disrupted a school function.

At the sound of a police whistle, the protesters in the room interrupted Conn's address to prospective student applicants and began chanting their list of grievances.

As Conn left under a police escort, he was followed by those students who had come considering a career in the CIA.
